

As a paying subscriber to XM Satellite Radio, I find it appalling and illogical to see restrictions such as those outlined in NAB's petition 04-160. I believe that the monthly fee, as well as proprietary hardware necessary to receive XM radio (and other satellite services) exempts me from intervening from a group such as the NAB. XM never has been a public service, and therefore not subject to the same rules as public radio stations. I enjoy the traffic and weather services provided by XM, and find them indispensable as nothing comparable is available over public airwaves. Of course, the other offerings provided by satellite radio far surpass public broadcast stations in every measurable way. In addition, I hope to receive even more enhanced services in the future. I respectfully urge the FCC to reject NAB's petition 04-160. It is clear that the arguments of the petition are baseless and illogical.

Sincerely,
Eric Miller
